

BRANDT DUE TODAY FOR FOUR-DAY VISIT

DAVID LANDAU, Jerusalem Correspondent

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's German Chancellor today as he begins his four-day visit to Israel. The visit is the first of its kind since the Six Day War and is expected to be a landmark in the history of German-Israeli relations.

Mr. Brandt's visit is expected to be a landmark in the history of German-Israeli relations. He is expected to meet with Israeli leaders and to discuss the current situation in the Middle East.

respondent in Bonn, Brian Arthur, cables: "The shadows over the relations between our two peoples cannot be brushed away," Brandt soberly acknowledged to Israeli journalists recently. "We cannot run away from the terrible past."

For one purpose of his visit, in Mr. Brandt's words, is confirmation of the wish to "normalize" this past and the need to "patiently work on the new foundation of understanding" which he sees growing up between West Germany and Israel.

Mr. Brandt believes the time has come to look ahead and not just back. He says he thinks his visit can serve as a "bridge" between today's Germans and Jews.

Mr. Brandt also has no personal guilt complex, because of his own record in the Nazi era. He resented Hitler as a political refugee in Scandinavia from 1933 until the war's end.

His policy toward Israel has been to approach "normalcy." He has thus largely dismantled the post-war concept of "special relations" with the Jewish State, speaking instead of a "special character."

In practice this has meant Bonn's refusal to legislate massive new financial compensation to Jews who suffered under the swastika, and a balanced policy in the Middle East conflict.

After 1952 the West German taxpayer paid out 45,000 marks ($15,000), in compensation to Israel and to individual Jewish victims of Nazism, with another 45,000 marks earmarked until the end of this century, according to official government figures. Only a fraction of this amount (3,000 marks) was specified for the Israeli state. The rest went and will go to individual Jews in and outside Israel.

Above and beyond existing Bonn legislation, new claims for various categories of Jews persecuted by Hitler, have been advanced, some backed by the Israeli Government, others put forth by World Jewish Congress President Dr. Nahum Goldmann.

A competent Bonn Finance Ministry source said if all these unlegislated claims were added, up they could total 27,000 marks.

Mr. Brandt is understood to feel the limit has been reached. His aides predict he will resist expected compensation requests in Jerusalem, offering instead Bonn Government guarantees for German private investment in Israel's economy.

The Chancellor has asserted that Israel's "right of existence" cannot be questioned, and it is assumed his sympathies would be with the Jewish state if it were seriously threatened by its Arab neighbors. But Bonn hopes its "non-alignment" between Israelis and Arabs will give it a bigger say in the unstable Middle East situation which could threaten Europe's oil lines and Brandt's own painstaking policy of East-West détente. "Peace in Europe cannot not be considered secure, if the Mediterranean area and the Middle East live in non-peace," Mr. Brandt said recently.

The Chancellor has held detailed discussions on the Middle East with President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev, and Bonn Foreign Minister Walter Scheel recently sounded out the governments in Cairo, Amman, and Beirut.

When Mr. Brandt comes to Jerusalem he will do so with the impression that neither the Russians nor the Arabs want war in the Middle East.

GOLD DECLINES

PARIS.—Speculators against the dollar showed signs of exhaustion yesterday amid predictions of imminent U.S. measures to strengthen the American economy.

Some important bankers and officials attending a 20-nation international monetary conference here were saying that the pressure against the U.S. currency may have passed its peak. London bank sources indicated it was only a temporary recovery.

Following a sharp decline on Monday, the dollar started to rally Tuesday afternoon and continued to perk up yesterday. Mostly marginal gains were registered yesterday, but closed with a burst of strength in Frankfurt. It ended the day on the German exchange at 2.64 marks, a 1.8 per cent jump of Tuesday's close of 2.5940 marks.

Gold, the traditional investment for speculators against the dollar, also dropped sharply in price on the London bullion market, falling $5 from Tuesday afternoon's fixing to $121. On Tuesday morning, it hit an all-time record of $127.

In Zurich, gold closed at between $121 and $123 an ounce, well down from the all-time high of $127 reached there Tuesday. The metal was fixed at $122.51 in Frankfurt, against Tuesday's price of $124.44. In Paris, gold was traded at $116, down more than $6 from Tuesday's price.

"Speculators have been buying back dollars they sold Tuesday and Monday to realize a profit on the dollar's earlier decline in value," (Continued on page 2, col. 2)

U.N. DEBATE ON MID-EAST OPENS

Israel urges talks, Arabs call for withdrawal

UNITED NATIONS.—Israel's U.N. Ambassador, Yosef Tekoah, suggested in the Security Council yesterday that "proximity" talks should be held to discuss the reopening of the Suez Canal.

Representatives of Israel and Egypt would be present in separate rooms and negotiate through an intermediary, Mr. Tekoah said at the opening session of the Council debate on the Middle East.

Egypt's Foreign Minister, Mohamed Zayyat, who initiated the calling of the debate, said that Egypt was still ready to continue talks with Israel through the U.N.'s Middle East envoy to achieve a just and lasting settlement.

The price, however, "was not and cannot be the betrayal of our territorial integrity or the abandonment of the inalienable rights of the Palestinians."

Egypt would act if the Council did not, said Zayyat. Egypt and Jordan asked the Council to order an immediate withdrawal of Israeli forces from all Arab territories held since the Six Day War. The Council would have to assert its authority and restore these lands to the Arabs in accordance with its previous decisions, they said.

Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik, June president of the 15-member Council under the monthly rotation system, opened the meeting and said an "explosive situation" still existed in the Middle East.

The U.N. Secretary-General, Kurt Waldheim, told the Council that "great efforts" to bring about a Middle East peace agreement had produced "little progress." The fact remained that a settlement must primarily depend on the governments concerned, said Dr. Waldheim. "Neither they nor any other group of governments has so far been able to devise an effective means of reaching a settlement."

The Secretary-General said that "at the moment there seem to be few, if any, practical alternatives to the efforts of the United Nations in the quest for peace in the Middle East."

Mr. Tekoah said that while all other methods of finding a solution "have already been tested in the Middle East situation and have proved unsuccessful and even harmful, the method of negotiation has remained conspicuously absent."

The one way in which the United Nations could at this stage make a constructive contribution to the solution of the Middle East problem would be by encouraging the parties to enter negotiations," Mr. Tekoah said.

Israel "will continue to search for peace with perseverance and goodwill. Under no circumstances will Israel give up the right to establish a secure boundary of peace negotiations without any preconditions," Mr. Tekoah said.

Mr. Tekoah also said that while all other methods of finding a solution "have already been tested in the Middle East situation and have proved unsuccessful and even harmful, the method of negotiation has remained conspicuously absent."

The Secretary-General, who was formally introducing the report on the Middle East situation, which he issued as a document on May 21, said that there was "a vicious circle of action and reaction, violence and reprisal" which led to "a series of seemingly insurmountable obstacles to the process of conciliation and settlement."

The fact that conciliation and accord would unquestionably be to the advantage of all concerned had not yet carried enough weight to counter-balance the intensity of feeling and conflicts of interest that prevailed in the area, he said.

Nixon to give probers logs of Dean talks

WASHINGTON.—President Nixon yesterday agreed to provide the Senate committee investigating the Watergate bugging scandal with White House logs of meetings he held early this year with his former counsel, John Dean.

The White House said the logs would disprove a reported statement by Dean that he had discussed aspects of the Watergate coverup with Mr. Nixon or in Mr. Nixon's presence on at least 35 occasions between January and April of this year.

But there was confusion about whether the logs actually contained details of the substance of Mr. Nixon's conversations with Mr. Dean, who was sacked from his White House post on April 30, or whether the logs merely recorded the dates and times of the Nixon-Dean meetings.

Deputy White House press secretary Gerald Warren was vague on this point at a White House press conference, in which he announced Mr. Nixon's decision voluntarily to hand over the logs.

The White House decision to make available details of the logs appeared to head off the prospect of a confrontation with the Senate Watergate committee and special government prosecutor Archibald Cox. Cox is conducting an independent investigation of an alleged high-level White House cover-up of political espionage against the Democrats during the 1972 presidential campaign.

Announcing the decision to hand over the information to the Senate committee, Warren said the White House also looked forward to reaching an agreement with Cox to make the information available to him, too.

Meanwhile, Mr. Nixon faced a mounting clamor of demands from within his own party to submit to questioning about his knowledge of a White House cover-up of the Watergate bugging scandal.

Mr. Nixon is receiving repeated warnings from Republican legislators and governors that he must soon answer some tough questions about his role in the Watergate affair if he is not to suffer further political damage.

Assistant Senate Republican leader Robert Griffin, of Michigan, said on Tuesday it was almost essential that Mr. Nixon go before the Senate investigating committee or hold a press conference to "answer the tough questions."

This was the first time a member of the Republican congressional leadership has made such a suggestion.

And the possibility of impeachment was due to surface in the House of Representatives late yesterday with Congressman Robert McCloskey, of California, a maverick (Continued on page 4, col. 2)

Laird given White House staff post

WASHINGTON (Reuters).—President Nixon yesterday named former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird as Counselor to the President for Domestic Affairs, succeeding John Ehrlichman, who resigned over the Watergate bugging scandal.

Mr. Nixon also announced that Gen. Alexander Haig, who has been serving as temporary assistant to the President, will join the White House staff permanently to carry out many of the duties formerly performed by H.R. (Bob) Haldeeman, who also quit a month ago over Watergate.

Mr. Nixon expanded the role of White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler, who will in the future be an assistant to the President and advise him on policy in addition to continuing to act as presidential spokesman.

A White House statement said Laird will be responsible for the overall formulation and coordination of domestic policy and will hold cabinet rank. Laird will also sit on the National Security Council, the President's top foreign policy panel.

Laird, 50, served as Defense Secretary during Mr. Nixon's first four years in office. He is a former congressman from Wisconsin, and is highly regarded by members of Congress.

As Defense Secretary, the tough astute politician played a major role in winding down the Vietnam War under orders from Mr. Nixon. He also succeeded in ending military conscription five months before its deadline of July 1973. When he retired as Defense Secretary, Laird said he had no plans to run for Congress again, but he was believed still to have political ambitions.

Syrian military chief for Cairo meeting

CAIRO (UPI).—Syrian Defense Minister Maj. Gen. Mustafa Tlas arrived in Cairo yesterday at the head of a military delegation, the Middle East News Agency said. Tlas, who will spend a few days in Cairo, was greeted by War Minister Gen. Ahmed Ismail. The agency did not elaborate.

Attempts to avert doctors' strike

By MACABEE DEAN, Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV.—Representatives of the Israel Medical Association and the Government and Kupat Holim met last night to try to reach a wage agreement which would avert the strike of the country's salaried doctors which is scheduled to start this morning (Thursday) throughout the country.

Particulars of the outcome of the meeting are expected only early this morning and news if the strike will take place or not will be announced this morning over Israel Radio.

Present at yesterday's meeting were: Victor Shemtov, Minister of Health, Ya'acov Nitsan, Civil Service Commissioner and Asher Yadin, director-general of Kupat Holim, all three representing the employers, and Dr. Ram Yishai, head of the Israel Medical Association and Dr. Gideon Mendels, deputy head of the Medical Association.

Discussions on Tuesday morning on averting the strike ended without any result when both sides refused to budge from their previous stand, with the employers offering a 40 per cent plus wage increase while the doctors demanded a 60 per cent plus increase.

The Israel Medical Association last night went ahead with its plans for holding a nationwide strike. All doctors working for Magen David Adom, the police, the Defence Forces and outlying villages are exempt from the strike. Hospitals will operate with skeleton staff on Saturdays and holidays while all Kupat Holim and hospital clinics will be closed. However, the Medical Association is publishing this morning a list of strike centres where doctors can be contacted in case of emergencies. (Kupat Holim — Page 2)

U.S. stops building controversial jet

WASHINGTON (AP).—The Pentagon decided yesterday against building any more of the controversial F111 swingwing fighter bombers.

Deputy Secretary of Defence William Clements notified Congress he has decided to end production of the F111, once known as the TFX, when the current run is completed late next year.

By that time, the U.S. Air Force will have 543 F111s, including bombers and fighter bombers.

Kupat Holim over-ruled Shavuot holidaymakers on wage pact with staff head for the North

By MARK SEGAL
Jerusalem Post Reporter
TEL AVIV. — The Histadrut on Tuesday overruled the Kupat Holim management and suspended the wage agreement reached with the health fund's administrative staff. The staff had lifted their strike threat on the strength of the promised wage increases.

This unprecedented step was taken by two hurriedly-summoned meetings of the Histadrut Central Committee and the Trade Union Department. Speakers protested at the privileged position enjoyed by the Kupat Holim administrative personnel compared to other public officials, especially those employed in Histadrut offices.

The Histadrut leaders were alarmed at the threatening mood of other groups of Histadrut officials in the wake of the extra money won by the Kupat Holim staff.

Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon told the Central Committee that the agreement will remain suspended until the end of the overall negotiations for all public officials covered by the standard wage scale. This encompasses all white-collar workers employed in the public, state and Histadrut sectors.

Reflecting his colleagues' anger, Mr. Ben-Aharon rapped the Kupat Holim management for having signed the agreement without gaining prior approval from the central Histadrut policymaking bodies. He also scored the clause governing arbitration of any disagreements between management and staff of Kupat Holim.

The Central Committee was especially angry that the Kupat Holim management and particularly its chairman, Asher Yadin (himself a member of the Committee in his dual capacity as Hevrat Ovdim Secretary), had gone over the Trade Union Department's head. Department chief Uriel Abrahamowicz warned of the chain reaction that could be caused by the extra earnings won by the Kupat Holim staff and stressed sharp objections to the arbitration clause, especially as all matters pertaining to wages in the Histadrut sector came under the Trade Union Department.

Nation-wide collective labour agreements were within the sole prerogative of the Trade Union Department, he said. The nature of the Israeli wage structure made it essential that individual managements and staff committees not reach separate agreements without due consultation with the authorized, elected national trade union bodies.

Principally, the Histadrut has reservations about two sections of the Kupat Holim wage agreement. They concern payment of an extra 15% to all administrative staff from April 1, 1974 (except for Kupat Holim hospital staff, who were awarded this increase when their conditions were equalized with those of Government hospital workers and arbitrators).

Mr. Yadin, who was summoned to the Central Committee meeting from last-minute talks with the physicians aimed at averting the doctors' strike, declared that he will accept as binding any decision adopted.

Tens of thousands of Israelis — including a large number of Arabs — took advantage of warm, sunny weather yesterday to spend the Shavuot holiday out-of-doors. The Kinneret, beaches and the nature spots of the Jezreel Valley were particularly popular, as many holiday-makers set up tents on Tuesday and spent the night there.

Some 15,000 persons visited the Sakne (Gan Hashlosha) and 4,000 were at the Harod Spring, according to police. Thousands more were turned away when it became overcrowded.

But police said the holiday went off without a hitch in the North. No road accidents were reported during the day, and there were no complaints of theft or burglary.

First-fruit pageants were held at most kibbutzim to celebrate the harvest festival. In addition to their crops, farming villages displayed their harvest machinery (including crop-dusting planes). The hotels and guest houses in Tiberias and most of the North were reported fully booked.

In Jerusalem and Bnei Brak, the ultra-Orthodox could be seen walking about in the early hours of yesterday morning, dressed in their holiday coats and wide-brimmed fur hats. Many of the very observant traditionally stay up all night on the eve of Shavuot in order to pray at the crack of dawn. (As well as being a harvest festival, Shavuot commemorates the revelation on Mount Sinai.)

Thousands of worshippers crowded the Great Synagogue of Tel Aviv and jammed the doorways for services. The new Chief Rabbi of Tel Aviv, Yitzhak Yedidya Frenkel, gave the sermon before the "Yizkor" prayer. The President, the country's Chief Rabbi and the Chief Army chaplain were present.

Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir told the Knesset Finance Committee on Tuesday that various "funds for special projects" were expected to raise some $1,000m. for education, health and social projects over the next five years.

Mr. Sapir, who repeatedly denied the existence of a "Sapir Fund," brought along several of his fellow ministers to explain the contributions to the work of their offices.

At the start of the session, Committee chairman Yisrael Kargman overruled a motion for an open debate from Gahal Committee member Yohanan Bader.

Mr. Sapir said that of the $1,000 million, $250m. had already been pledged for general projects and agreements had been signed for $70m. out of a total of $370m. which was intended to be spent on maintenance of the universities. The remaining $450m. was expected to be raised in the next five years.

Some $140m. would go towards educational development and $25m. on building 60 high schools, 20 for Arab children. The funds would also collect $30m. to build 2,500 kindergartens, and $45m. to set up 600 day-care centres, he said.

A further $225m. would be raised to add 10,000 more hospital beds and expand nursing education, while another $100m. would go into building and equipping homes for the aged, welfare institutions and vocational training centres.

Jerusalem woman arrested for husband's murder
A Jerusalem man, 50-year-old Reuven Mizrahi, was murdered Tuesday night with a kitchen knife. Police have arrested his wife, Shoshana, 39, as the principal suspect.

The woman called an ambulance to her home at six p.m. and told the medical team that arrived that her husband had stabbed himself accidentally while peeling cucumbers. But she reportedly admitted later to the police that she had stabbed him during a quarrel.

The couple's 10 children are now in the custody of the City's Social Welfare Department and neighbours.

Three 'violent' suspects escape from lock-up
PETAH TIKVA. — Three alleged criminals who escaped from the local lock-up on Tuesday afternoon were still at large last night, and the police have asked the public to help catch them. They are all considered "violent" and dangerous, and are believed to be armed.

The three are Menahem Dayan, 23, suspected of aggravated assault; Shimon Sofer, 18, suspected of setting a house on fire in Netanya; and David Dahari, 18, suspected of breaching and entering.

Germany's Chancellor Willy Brandt will begin his official four-day visit to Israel today with a wreath-laying ceremony at Yad Vashem, the Nazi Holocaust Martyrs' and Heroes' Memorial in Jerusalem.

In another symbolic gesture, the German Head of Government will devote Monday, his last day here, to a visit to the Masada fortress near the Dead Sea, the site of the last stand of the first Jewish revolt against the Romans 1900 years ago.

When he arrives this afternoon by a German Air Force plane, he will be met by Prime Minister Golda Meir and both the German and Israeli national anthems will be played. The Chancellor's arrival statement, as well as his other public statements and speeches, will be in English.

It was announced in Bonn yesterday that Mr. Brandt's wife, Rut, had to cancel her visit at the last moment because of ill health.

The first working session with Premier Meir will begin this afternoon right after his visit to Yad Vashem. It will be devoted mostly to a tete-a-tete conversation with Mrs. Meir. In the evening, the Chancellor and his party will be the guests of Mrs. Meir at a dinner at the Chagall Hall in the Knesset.

Tomorrow morning, Mr. Brandt will first call on President Kahat and then have another two-hour working session with Mrs. Meir and her aides. After a luncheon with Foreign Minister Abba Eban, Mr. Brandt and his party will fly to Kibbutz Gnesson, on the shores of Lake Kinneret, where he will be the dinner guest of Deputy Premier Yigal Alon, a founding member of the kibbutz.

Saturday morning is Mr. Brandt's only time off for rest. He intends to spend it mostly fishing in the Lake, with fishing gear supplied by his hosts.

He is then expected to visit Kibbutz Gadot, which suffered a great deal before 1967 from Syrian shelling and was the site of the German Chancellor's visit to the Masada fortress near the Dead Sea, the site of the last stand of the first Jewish revolt against the Romans 1900 years ago.

State Cup holders reach soccer semi-final

By PAUL KOHN
Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter
TEL AVIV. — State Cup holders Tel Aviv Hapoel, cup finalists Jerusalem Hapoel, National League champions Ramat Gan Hakoah-Maccabi and Petah Tikva Maccabi yesterday reached the semi-finals of the State Cup soccer competition.

Tel Aviv Hapoel meets Jerusalem Hapoel in Jerusalem on Saturday and Hakoah meets Petah Tikva Maccabi at Ganei Gil in the second semi-final. The return games will take place next Tuesday.

Hakoah had the hardest time yesterday, sneaking through past Haifa Maccabi 1:0 but advancing on the strength of penalty kicks. Last Saturday Haifa beat Hakoah by the same score. Until the 86th minute, Haifa Maccabi's bunker-style defence kept Hakoah out, but it was in that minute that stopper Danny Hattel blasted through to score with a shot from 15 metres. There was no further score in the 30 minutes of extra time, and the game was decided on penalty spot kicks. Hakoah scored 4 to Haifa Maccabi's 2.

Jerusalem Hapoel had the easiest path into the semi-finals, as Shimon failed to turn up in Jerusalem for the game. Last Saturday, Jerusalem Hapoel won 8:0, so the Shimon players told their management.

To cost IL10.5m.

'Munich '72 Memorial sports centre planned

AMSTERDAM (AP). — Plans for the creation of an international sports centre in Israel, to commemorate the Israeli sportsmen who died in the massacre at the Munich Olympic Games last September, were announced at a news conference here on Tuesday.

The centre, to be built in Raanana, north of Tel Aviv, is expected to cost 7 million guilders (about IL10.5m.).

The initiative for the "Munich 1972 memorial" was taken by Dutch-born Mrs. Anke Spitzer-de Jongh, widow of the trainer of the Israeli fencing team at the Olympic Games, who was one of the Munich victims.

Mrs. Spitzer-de Jongh donated the 300,000 guilders (about IL450,000) she received as compensation for the loss of her husband from the West German government.

"Her declaration 'one can not live with hate,' was taken as the slogan for an international fund-raising campaign," the president of the Dutch foundation "Munich 1972 Memorial," Leo van der Kar said.

Dr. Henk Vonhoff, former Dutch deputy minister of culture and sports and a member of the Israeli committee in Holland, where the old saying "sports unites the peoples" can come true. The Dutch committee has received responses from countries, including the U.S., Germany and Great Britain.

Willy Daume, president of West German Olympic Committee, had promised full support memorial, the news conference told.

Akre chief magistrate, Amnon Carmi, one of the Israeli committee members, said the Israeli Government had all-out cooperation for the Minister of Sports Yigal Alon (the Israeli Memorial committee) added. A site for the centre was chosen at Raanana. Aviv and preliminary plans construction by architect Rechter are finished, he said.

An international fund-raising campaign will start in September first anniversary of the Munich massacre.

NETANYA. — The central encounter in the eighth round of the international chess tournament here, which brought together Grandmasters Lubomir Kavalek and Sammy Reshevsky (both of the U.S.), ended in a draw and left both in their previous positions: Kavalek leading the 18-players-field half a point ahead of Reshevsky.

In the encounter between these two players in Netanya two years ago, it was Reshevsky who emerged victorious.

Grandmaster Lubomir Kavalek (who plays under the Czech colours as a tribute to his native country which he left a few months ago for West Germany), retained his third place following his draw with Raly's Stefano Tatal. He was joined by Anthony Sady of the U.S., who beat Yair Kraidman, Israel's most successful player so far. Meir Rom gained his first point by beating Brandt's Heider Camera.

Overall standings after the eight round were: Kavalek 6 1/2 points, Reshevsky 6, Pachman and Sady 5 1/2, Kraidman and Damjanovic 5.

Coercion alleged in bank robbery acquittal

TEL AVIV. — An accused bank robber was acquitted on Tuesday for lack of evidence, after the bench disqualified the statements he had made to his police interrogators. The District Court judges ruled that there was good reason to believe the suspect had made the confessions under coercion. They added that the suspect, Yisrael Yeshurun of Tel Ghorazim, did not appear completely innocent, but they did not have enough evidence to convict him. He was charged with holding up a Tel Ghorazim bank last December with several other men, and getting away with IL2,000. A cashier managed to escape with another IL15,000 in cash before the robbers could get their hands on it.

Molk: Almogi is man for Haifa Mayor

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — Labour Council Secretary Eliezer Molk said on Tuesday that he did not consider himself a Labour party candidate for mayor. Mr. Molk had been mooted as a possible candidate to succeed the late Moshe Wismann.

He told The Post he believed that Labour Minister Yosef Almogi should be the candidate "and I hope he will honour the Party's decision and the citizens' will."

Mr. Almogi enjoyed the public's confidence and would be able to run the town properly, he thought. This would make it impossible for him to be in the next Cabinet, "and Haifa will lose its representative in the Government" but he was convinced that the mayorality was important enough.

Asked whether he would consider running for deputy-mayor, Mr. Molk hesitated. He said he had "not been asked," and added that "under the circumstances, I shall seek the Party's candidacy for another term as Labour Council Secretary."

It was learned that Moshe Wismann, M.K., the Haifa Labour Party branch secretary who has also been mentioned as a candidate, will remain in the Knesset if Mr. Almogi runs.

Kahane detained again for letters to Arabs

Jewish Defence League leader Meir Kahane was jailed for 48 hours on Tuesday on suspicion of continuing to send letters to local Arabs urging them to "emigrate."

He is already on trial for incitement in connection with similar letters he sent to the JDL. His activities there could prove illegal, and if the Americans arrested him, Kahane would not be back in time for the continuation of his trial for attempted arms smuggling — the prosecution said.

Jewish Defence League sources have accused the Israeli police of doing U.S. President Nixon's work for him — keeping Kahane out of the U.S. during the Nixon-Brezhnev summit.

Kahane has been charged, along with former underground fighter Amihai Hagin and other JDL activists, of trying to send arms abroad for use in combating Arab terror. The police representative charged that the letters caused "hostility and hatred" toward the Israeli authorities.

Not arresting their sender, he said, would appear as if the Government was doing nothing to stop this incitement.

Judge M. Shalgi at first ruled that Kahane should be released on bail, since his release would not hamper the police investigation. However, he agreed to remand the suspect for 48 hours to allow the prosecution to appeal his decision in the District Court.

In the Tel Aviv court, Kahane's lawyer Meir Shalev pleaded that a trip to the U.S. was essential for his client to take care of his business affairs there. He said Kahane's livelihood depended on his being able to leave Israel at this time.

But the District Attorney's office countered that the police had reason to believe Kahane intended exploiting his planned U.S. trip for political purposes on behalf of the JDL. His activities there could prove illegal, and if the Americans arrested him, Kahane would not be back in time for the continuation of his trial for attempted arms smuggling — the prosecution said.

The 48-hour remand order was issued in Jerusalem Magistrate's Court, at the request of the police, who said Kahane was still sending letters to Arabs in Israel and the territories, offering them financial aid if they would emigrate. The police representative charged that the letters caused "hostility and hatred" toward the Israeli authorities.

Not arresting their sender, he said, would appear as if the Government was doing nothing to stop this incitement.

If new terminal remains idle All container transport to stop, Zim warns

By YAA'AOVY FRIEDLER

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — The Zim management warned on Tuesday it would stop the sailing of all container ships to Israel, thus virtually suspending import and export, if the container terminal in Haifa port was not operated by Sunday.

The modern, new multi-million pound terminal has been idle since Sunday due to the port formen's disputing the management's prerogative to appoint the five terminal directors.

(The port spokesman announced last night that the management had appointed the five original directors for the terminal and would order its operation this morning. If the formen refused, the ones would be on them, he said.)

On Tuesday, Haifa Labour Council Secretary Eliezer Molk placed the responsibility for the situation on port manager Yitzhak Rahav. Mr. Rahav insisted that the question of management prerogative was one of principle.

13 SHIPS STUCK

The Zim spokesman said the company had 13 container ships and 2,000 containers stuck in the port, causing losses of tens of thousands of dollars, as well as seriously disrupting the firm's sailing schedules, which would cause more, long-term losses. They had therefore warned the port authority that sailings would be suspended, as the ships would be in any case idle.

The dispute started two months ago, when, after consultation with the formen's committee as laid down in the work agreement, the port management appointed five terminal directors from among the formen, and the port management employees. The formen objected to one appointment given to one of their own men, and demanded the job, of mechanical equipment director, be given to another, veteran formen.

The port manager transferred responsibility for the terminal to the formen's committee, and called on them to make all the appointments from their own ranks. The committee raised the number of directors to seven, including members of the management employees.

Mr. Rahav rejected this on the grounds that they had no authority to make appointments outside their own sector. The formen then appointed only their own men, whereupon the employees' committee objected, and the terminal was idled.

Mr. Molk told a press conference on Tuesday that "consulting" the formen was not sufficient if management did not accept their demand that equipment director remain in the hands of a veteran man, or that he be allowed to serve as joint director with the management appointees. Nor could he blame the employees for objecting to having been excluded from the terminal direction.

The formen had "done everything" to get the terminal working, Mr. Molk said, and he thought it was now up to "the manager, or his superiors" to take the next step. Mr. Rahav said that the question was not one of who should direct the equipment, but the deeper one of the management's prerogative. "I honoured the agreement to the letter. I consulted the formen's committee, but I must insist on the management's right to make the final choice for the good of the port." He considered the formen's choice of equipment director unfit for the task.

The formen had failed to get the terminal going with their own men, he went on, and the dispute was now between them and the employees' committee. "Now I shall make the appointments as I see fit and I shall insist that the formen honour my decision," he said.

Zim claims on Rumanian yard to be arbitrated

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

HAIFA. — The Zim Board of Directors on Sunday authorized the management to seek international arbitration if no agreement is reached with a Rumanian shipyard on the price of two freighters built there for Zim.

The two ships are of the "roll-on roll-off" type and were to have cost $4.6m. each. But when the first of the ships was to be delivered last spring, the yard asked for an extra $1m. each, claiming to have miscalculated costs. According to Zim, this would make the ships uneconomical. All negotiations have so far been fruitless.

Under the terms of the contract, the International Chamber of Commerce in Paris may be called upon for arbitration in case of insurmountable differences.

The Zim Board also approved the order of two 4,000-ton container ships to be built in the Israeli Shipyard in Haifa. The ships will each carry 380 containers and are to cost $6.25m. each. They will take two years to construct.

They will be the first merchant ships to be built in the Haifa Yard since it built three small coasters ten years ago.

Instructors at Technion end strike

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — The 525 assistants and instructors of the Technion on Tuesday decided to stop their strike, now in its third week. The decision was made at a general meeting after the committee reported that the management had made an acceptable offer to settle their wage claim.

According to the committee, the management undertook to pay scholarship grants of IL720 for both 1972 and 1973, assure their seniority for sabbatical leave if they continue as staff members after obtaining their higher degree and to appoint a committee to rule on their demand to have study prizes changed into regular wages.

Following their decision to resume teaching, the management decided not to serve the injunction it had obtained from the labour court on Monday.

Earlier in the day, the chairman of the assistants and instructors division in the Technion Faculty Association, David Oron, announced that he would resign from the Association staff. He said that on Monday the chairman of the Association had made a deal behind their back with the management to make them return to work on conditions they had already rejected.

Government lawyers threaten strike

TEL AVIV. — Lawyers in the civil service have declared a labour dispute, and threaten to go out on strike June 17 if their demands are not met by then.

The lawyers have two main demands: Implementation of the Olshan Committee recommendations regarding their grading and special effort grants for lawyers who appear in court.

The Olshan Committee found that senior jurists (district attorneys and others in the same grade) should be granted the same pay as judges.

Injunction against lifeguards' strike

TEL AVIV. — Tel Aviv area lifeguards were enjoined from striking on Tuesday. The temporary injunction remains in effect until 4.30 this afternoon, when the District Labour Court is to hear the lifeguards' side of the current dispute as well as that of their employers, the Municipality.

The city claims the 1972 labour contract with the lifeguards is still legally in effect, and that the labour dispute declaration filed by the guards does not entitle them to strike before June 19. Nevertheless, the lifeguards put up black flags on the bathing beaches on Tuesday, in preparation for a strike.

The lifeguards' dispute has not been approved by their representative labour organisations — the Clerks Union and the Tel Aviv Municipal Employees Union. The guards want higher pay, including a special "risk" bonus. (The Post)

RED CARPET FOR PEKING F.M. IN BRITAIN

(UPI). — Britain rolled out a red carpet yesterday for a visit by Chinese Foreign Minister Chi Pao-fei — the first visit by a Chinese foreign minister to the British Isles since the end of the second world war, when he was met by the secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

These problems will play an important part of Chi's discussions, along with trade prospects and special deals. Britain hopes China will firm up its option for Concorde supersonic planes.

A more delicate matter is Peking's plan for a permanent representation in Hongkong, which it raised directly with Home earlier this year.

Britain is very hesitant, for fear it would raise some complicated and explosive problems in the colony and could affect the status of its governor. The chief fear is that such representation could form a focus for controversial political activities that could inflame the colony. The issue has been under careful consideration here for some time, and is certain to be discussed in the next days.

Chi has brought experts on Europe, West Asia and North Africa with him. He will be staying at the plush Churchill Hotel in London's West End, not far from the Chinese Embassy.

Pompidou in 'great form' at Cabinet meeting

(Reuters). — President Pompidou said yesterday about his state of health, "I am in great form."

His country home, informed sources said.

Pompidou usually takes a break over this coming Whitsun weekend, but he is leaving two days earlier this week for his country home, at Caudebec, in Normandy.

Asked by reporters whether Pompidou's remarks meant that there was nothing wrong with him, the spokesman replied that the President would not be resting at Caudebec if nothing was wrong with him.

Announcing the cancellation of his official engagements on Tuesday, the President's Palace said Pompidou needed rest after suffering several bouts of influenza earlier this year.

SOVIET MINISTER TO ROBE TUPOLEV CRASH

— The Soviet Council of Ministers has appointed Deputy L.V. Smirnov, an engineer, to investigate the crash of a TU-144 supersonic airliner near Paris on Sunday. The investigation is being conducted by a so-called "Action Committee for the Freedom of Rudolf Hess" which declared itself to be responsible for the crash of the Soviet plane at the Paris Air Show. We knew nothing of this group's existence until now.

Investigators have refused to make any statements on the disaster pending completion of their work. There had been no suggestion of sabotage before yesterday's statement.

42 Italians on trial for Fascism

ROME (AP). — Forty-two members of an extreme right political group went on trial here yesterday on charges of attempting to rebuild the outlawed Fascist Party.

It is the largest group ever brought to trial under a 1952 law which makes it a crime to revive the party "in any form."

Artist Marc Chagall arrived in his native Russia with his wife this week for the first time in over 50 years. His visit coincided with an exhibition of his work in Moscow's Tretyakov Museum. Chagall wept when he saw three canvases that had been kept in storage for 53 years. The paintings were hung alongside 76 contemporary lithographs and two gouaches which the artist donated to the museum. To a spectator who asked him if he remembered the paintings well, Chagall answered with tears in his eyes and replied, "More than you can imagine."

The artist has lived in Paris since he left Russia. (AP radiophoto)

Astronauts try to fix stuck Skylab panel

HOUSTON. — The urgency of freeing a stuck Skylab solar panel during a two-man space walk today was underscored yesterday when another battery on the space station began losing power.

The three astronauts, aboard the orbiting laboratory yesterday took four hours to rehearse for a walk during which commander Charles Conrad Jr. will try to pry or cut free the jammed panel. Success would nearly double the electricity to their power-short laboratory.

Two of the 18 available batteries already have failed, and flight director Charles Lewis told newsmen that if the third went out, and the panel could not be freed, the astronauts would have to drastically curtail their research. He said they might have to abandon the huge workshop area of the station to save energy and retreat to two smaller rooms where they could conduct limited earth resources, solar observatory and medical experiments.

The flight directors said the third battery began losing power Tuesday night, apparently because of a short circuit in a transistor, and was producing only about one-half to two-thirds of its potential.

If no problems develop, Conrad and Dr. Joseph Kerwin will don freestanding Skylab solar panel during a two-man space walk today and erect the handrail. About half an hour later, just as a 50-minute daylight pass begins, Conrad is to work his way down the handrail to the stuck panel.

With Kerwin waiting near the open hatch to assist, the commander will try to cut through or pry loose a one-inch aluminum strip which is holding the one-ton panel against the side of the workshop.

The decision to go ahead with the spacewalk only came after doubts were resolved about a suspected heart abnormality which threatened to keep mission commander Conrad from taking the walk. But doctors wrote Conrad a clean bill of health Tuesday night after a bicycle exercise cleared up numerous misunderstandings. "We see nothing of a medical nature that would prevent Conrad from performing the EVA (extra-vehicular activity)," the doctors said.

The medical misunderstanding created a highly charged emotional climate after Conrad became upset and asked for a private phone conversation with Johnson Space Centre director Christopher Kraft.

TIDAL WAVE TOLL MAY BE 1,500

JAKARTA (Reuters). — About 1,500 people, mostly fishermen, are feared to have died in a series of severe storms and tidal waves which swept the Flores Sea over a month ago, according to delayed reports reaching Jakarta.

A Communications Ministry spokesman said the fishermen of the small island of Palu were at sea when the disaster struck between April 29 and May 2, and that at least 53 other persons died on the island of Flores.

He said no further details were available because of communications difficulties — and the Social Affairs Ministry, which deals with natural disasters, said it had received no reports from the area.

Flores and Palu are part of a group of Indonesia's far-flung islands east of Java called Nusa Tenggara (Lesser Sunda). It is not uncommon for news of disasters to take several weeks to reach Jakarta, the capital.

The Jakarta daily newspaper "Harian KAMI" reported that after tidal waves struck Flores, floods hit the island capital of Ende, damaging roads and buildings. Ende lies more than 1,600 kms. east of Jakarta.

Court will decide on German treaty

BOON (Reuters). — West German President Gustav Heinemann yesterday signed Bonn's controversial treaty with East Germany which seals the division of Germany into two separate sovereign states for the foreseeable future.

But the legal dispute as to whether the pact is compatible with the West German Constitution will not be finally settled until July 31 when the Constitutional Court — the highest in the land — will deliver a final ruling on it.

The 73-year-old Social Democratic President also signed yesterday the law enabling the Bonn Government to apply for membership of the U.N.

Faisal in Rabat for talks with Hassan

RABAT (Reuters). — King Faisal of Saudi Arabia arrived here yesterday from Geneva for a two-day official visit to Morocco, at the invitation of King Hassan.

No official programme of the visit has been released but it is understood that the two monarchs will have a series of political talks devoted mainly to the situation in the Middle East.

NEW BID IN VIETNAM CEASE-FIRE Kissinger sees Tho as fighting continues

PARIS (Reuters). — U.S. Presidential envoy Henry Kissinger and the North Vietnamese politburo member Le Duc Tho met here yesterday in a new round of talks to salvage the battered Vietnam peace pact and make the cease-fire effective.

The two men, who negotiated the peace agreement signed here on January 27, last met two weeks ago. In intensive talks which totalled 26 hours, they tried then to plug the loopholes in the peace agreements and work out what they hope to be a foolproof system to stop cease-fire violations on all sides.

On his arrival here from Washington on Tuesday night, Dr. Kissinger said that if he and Le Duc Tho continued the progress and cooperative spirit that was shown the last time, "then the prospects are reasonably good that we might conclude in this round."

For the first time in the history of the Vietnam peace negotiations, White House spokesman Ron Ziegler attended yesterday's meeting, held at a villa owned by the French Communist Party in the suburban Gif-sur-Yvette.

In Washington, it was stated that President Nixon wanted Mr. Ziegler to familiarize himself with some particular aspects of the Vietnam peace agreement and to have a better substantive grasp of the issues involved.

While the talks were going on in Paris, a Saigon report said that

LIBYA FORMS ANTI-ZIONIST JEWISH GROUP

LONDON (INA). — Libya announced the formation of a group called "Jews Against Zionism," in a four-page paid advertising supplement published yesterday in "The Times."

Members of the group, according to the announcement, include Alfred Lillenthal of the U.S. (formerly affiliated with the anti-Zionist American Council for Judaism), Marion Woolfson of London, and Israel Akiva Orr and Moshe Machover, both affiliated with the extremist Matzpen group. The group's address is given as the Libyan Embassy.

The supplement, paid by the Government of Libya, also included a speech by Libyan strongman Mu'ammarr Gaddafi, in which he denounced Zionism as "a racist philosophy."

Libyan arrests for defacing posters

TUNIS (Reuters). — Libyan police said yesterday they had arrested several people for defacing and tearing down posters about the country's current cultural revolution, the Libyan news agency reported.

The arrested people belonged to the opposition Islamic Liberation and Communist Parties, and had acted in accordance with party instructions, the agency said.

Search for missing Moroccan officials

RABAT (Reuters). — Air and ground forces were searching yesterday for a helicopter carrying four high-ranking Moroccan officials missing on a flight over the South Moroccan desert in a sandstorm, reliable sources said.

Among the passengers were the governor of Tarfaya Province.

MUSIC REVIEW

Youth take over the stage

Chamber Music at the Museum: Cilla Grossmeyer, soprano, with Idith Zvi at the piano; the Students' Chamber Orchestra and String Quartet of the Rubin Academy, Tel Aviv University, conducted by Jonathan Ronlik. (The Israel Museum, Jerusalem — June 2). Works by Ravel, Schumann, Wolf, Handel, Orlandi, Respighi, Liszt.

A concert with only young people performing, always a heart warming experience, and the strictest critical attitude should not be applied. At this concert especially, the standard generally was quite high.

Cilla Grossmeyer is already an accomplished singer, and her Schumann and Wolf were sheer delight. Her voice is clear and clean, her intonation above reproach and her interpretation does full justice to the texts; a pity that "Eccleziaste, jubilate" was not performed in full.

Edith Zvi was a sensitive and proficient accompanist.

The students' string quartet evinced budding talents and careful preparation, but of course a unity of four players is not born in a day.

The students' orchestra, a body of 16 strings, showed some corrigible faults, perhaps exaggerated in the bright acoustics of the auditorium. Attacks tended to be too sharp, and someone always seemed to be scratching his strings before the general entry of his group, undermining the precision. The conductor led his group into playing full-strength, as though for a hall of 3,000 seats, causing some parts to come out too grandiose or crude. On the credit side there was some impressive playing in the Handel Concerto Grosso in B minor, exciting sonorities in Orgad's "Ashmoret Rishona" (First Watch), and good intentions in Respighi's "Arie e dance antiche" — under Ronlik's treatment it completely lost its character as old lute music and any Renaissance sound intended by Respighi.

More dynamic shading, clearer articulation of phrases (there are also commas and serialisms in musical grammar!), and more attention to singing out the music from periods when singing was still part of music would further enhance the musical performance of this promising string orchestra.

YOHANAN BOHEM

Cabinet discusses local elections

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The Cabinet this week considered making the same concessions for municipal elections as for Knesset elections, but no decisions were made.

Interior Minister Yosef Burg said that voters in municipal elections who put two identical slips into the envelopes in the polling booth should not have their votes voided because of that. Similarly, Mr. Burg said, Knesset elections have been granted secretaries to make their work more efficient. This should be done for ballot committees for municipal elections too.

These two innovations were recently introduced for Knesset elections. The Cabinet, while favouring Dr. Burg's proposals, did not get round to deciding that draft legislation would be tabled in the House.

Police Minister Shlomo Hillel raised the problem of policemen's votes for municipal councils. Policemen can vote in the Knesset election, even though their duties on election day might prevent them from being at the polling stations, where they were registered, but this is not the case in the cities.

Dr. Burg said he was sure there would be no difficulty in having policemen vote in different polling stations, in their own town, but it would be hard to let them vote in a totally different area. The Cabinet decided to study the problem further.

THE BEST OF THE FAMOUS SOUTH AMERICAN CUISINE.

OUTRAGEOUS AUNT

Travels With My Aunt (Orly, Tel Aviv) has been adapted from Graham Greene's comic novel of the same name and if the film is hearty and jocular rather than ironical and subtle like the novel, it is yet full of amusing moments and is unfortunately well acted.

Aunt Augusta, a lady who has defied the years, and nephew Henry first meet at the funeral of Henry's mother, when Augusta informs him that all should have been in white as his mother was a virgin. While he is recovering from this shock his aunt carries him off with her and poor Henry, a staid bank manager whose greatest extravagance is cultivating dahlias, finds himself involved in her hair-raising intrigues. These range from concealing "pot" — her coloured "companion" (Lou Gossett) hides it among the ashes of the deceased — to stealing a Modigliani portrait.

Maggie Smith ("The Prime of Miss Brodie") gives an unflaggingly energetic and deliberately theatrical performance as the outrageously eccentric aunt and Alec McCowen's quiet, perfectly acted Henry makes a wonderful contrast. There is also a very good portrayal of a young American hippie (Cindy Williams) who shares Henry's sleep on the long ride from Paris to Istanbul.

Veteran George Cukor ("The Philadelphia Story" and "Dinner at Eight") has directed with verve and elegance, the scenes from Augusta's youth being particularly well staged.

A YOUTH CHOIR of the Baptist Trinity Church in San Antonio, Texas, comprising 120 high school pupils, has arrived for a short tour. They will perform at Kiryat Ananvim and at Kibbutz Kinneret.

Education fund at thrives goodwill

Mr. Leuvengart didn't want to use his own money for himself. Hadassah's aim tells here of the educational fund funded with the money.

Small orderly co-operation of Shavel Zion in the field of state-... any inquiry into an... on the one hand, to encourage research in the field of pharmaceutical industry, and the need, on the other hand, to refrain from fettering the freedom of action of those engaged in healing human diseases. If patents were granted for the use, for the first time, of a known substance, composition or instrument in the treatment of human ailments, but letters of patent were refused for a discovery relating to a new and unknown use for therapeutic purposes of a substance, composition or instrument already in use for the treatment of human ailments or whose potential for the treatment of human ailments is obvious.

Justice Kahn then went on to consider, in the light of the above conclusions, whether at the time the respondents in the present case had applied for their patent, it was a known fact that asopurinal could be used as a remedy for human ailments, concluding that the answer to this question was in the negative. The respondents' discovery had, therefore, been patentable, he held, despite the general prohibition against patenting methods for the therapeutic treatment of the human body. However, he wished to stress that in coming to this conclusion he did not intend laying down any hard and fast rule on how section 7(1) of the Patents Law should be interpreted and would leave this question open for the meanwhile. He also wished to observe, added Justice Kahn, that in so far as the validity of the respondents' patent was concerned, no importance should be attached to the fact that the asopurinal was combined with any acceptable carrier, as there was nothing significant in this.

For the rest, he concurred with Justice Witkon's reasoning and conclusions, Justice Kahn ended.

Justice Kister

Justice Kister concurred with Justice Witkon's judgment, subject to the reservation contained in Justice Kahn's judgment.

In so far as the policy of the legislature and of the courts on the question of medical patents is concerned, he continued, he thought they should bear in mind that there are both advantages and disadvantages to allowing inventors the opportunity of exploiting their inventions, or, alternatively, to limiting the possibilities of such exploitation.

Arthur Leuvengart (Prior, Tel Aviv)

In 1963, as a member of a study group, he was in Poland where he met a journalist from a Yiddish paper who brought his daughter along. The girl completely assimilated, faked no special relationship with the Jewish people, and had her studies and career mapped out where she was — until she went with the mission to Auschwitz. The next day she asked Mr. Leuvengart to help her to get away. He arranged for her permit, and education in Israel where she qualified as a doctor, and the idea of the Leuvengart fund was born.

Now most of the beneficiaries are children of Oriental families, especially those where large numbers preclude higher education even for the brightest. Eliseva Neumayer knows each recipient as an individual. The fund may supplement a Government grant, pay high school fees, enable a student to continue at college or seminar. It may allow him to take a room near his place of learning, give him his meals and his fare home weekends.

Mr. Leuvengart does not like personal expressions of thanks, preferring to keep in the background like a benevolent Fairy Godfather. His reward and that of everyone connected with the fund is the knowledge that more than 200 youngsters are doing more for themselves and others than would have been possible without this assistance.

His first enterprise was the Leuvengart Hall, a cultural focus for the whole district. He and his wife became increasingly involved with Israeli projects and they drew into them not only their own three children but many members of their families and an ever widening circle of friends.

CASHING IN ON MEDICAL DISCOVERIES

Justice Kahn

Justice Kahn, in concurring that the appeal should be dismissed, noted that the appellants had not challenged the fact that the discovery of a new and unexpected use for a known product is patentable. They had argued, on the contrary, that the issue centered on the use of a known product for the medical treatment of human beings and that in accordance with the law in England methods of medical treatment are not patentable.

He for his part agreed with Justice Witkon, held Justice Kahn, that because of the differences between the Patents and Designs Ordinance, which is the law applicable to the case under consideration, and the English Patents Act, there is no obligation on the Israeli courts to follow in the footsteps of English Law. The question arises, therefore, he continued, as to whether the court should refuse to be fettered by any restrictions with respect to patent applications for methods of treatment of human diseases, or whether some distinction should be drawn between patent applications for such methods and all other patent applications. He, unlike Justice Witkon, he held, was not prepared to equate all these applications, as he thought there were serious and weighty reasons for not creating, by way of letters of patent, a monopoly with respect to any particular method of medical treatment, when matters of life and death, or of alleviating human suffering, may be affected. This was also the attitude adopted by the Israeli legislature, he continued, when enacting section 7(1) of the new Patents Law, which provides that no patent shall be granted for a method of therapeutic treatment of the human body. This restriction, however, does not preclude granting a patent for an invention relating to the use, for the first time, for therapeutic purposes, of a known substance or composition which had till then not been used for treating the human body (see J.B. Benham in Industrial Property, Geneva, November 1972, p.224). He thought, therefore, held Justice Kahn, that a nice balance would be drawn between the need, on the one hand, to encourage research in the field of pharmaceutical industry, and the need, on the other hand, to refrain from fettering the freedom of action of those engaged in healing human diseases. If patents were granted for the use, for the first time, of a known substance, composition or instrument in the treatment of human ailments, but letters of patent were refused for a discovery relating to a new and unknown use for therapeutic purposes of a substance, composition or instrument already in use for the treatment of human ailments or whose potential for the treatment of human ailments is obvious.

Justice Kahn then went on to consider, in the light of the above conclusions, whether at the time the respondents in the present case had applied for their patent, it was a known fact that asopurinal could be used as a remedy for human ailments, concluding that the answer to this question was in the negative. The respondents' discovery had, therefore, been patentable, he held, despite the general prohibition against patenting methods for the therapeutic treatment of the human body. However, he wished to stress that in coming to this conclusion he did not intend laying down any hard and fast rule on how section 7(1) of the Patents Law should be interpreted and would leave this question open for the meanwhile. He also wished to observe, added Justice Kahn, that in so far as the validity of the respondents' patent was concerned, no importance should be attached to the fact that the asopurinal was combined with any acceptable carrier, as there was nothing significant in this.

For the rest, he concurred with Justice Witkon's reasoning and conclusions, Justice Kahn ended.

Justice Kister

Justice Kister concurred with Justice Witkon's judgment, subject to the reservation contained in Justice Kahn's judgment.

In so far as the policy of the legislature and of the courts on the question of medical patents is concerned, he continued, he thought they should bear in mind that there are both advantages and disadvantages to allowing inventors the opportunity of exploiting their inventions, or, alternatively, to limiting the possibilities of such exploitation.

The instant cheese dip

CHEESE dips for parties can be made instantly with Telma Blueband's four new flavoured packets — onion, garlic, Roquefort and Liptauer. Called "Dip Mixes" in English and "Gavun FGovim" in Hebrew, they are small, inexpensive (45 agorot each) foil-wrapped packets of dried flavouring to be stirred into 250 grams of any white cheese. (Telma's popular "green cow" — nine per cent fat — white cheese in a plastic tub is suggested.) The "dips" can be eaten on crackers, spread on sandwiches, or even mixed with cornflakes as a party snack. A thinner dip can be made with sour cream and a few spoonfuls of mayonnaise.

A non-dairy salad dressing can be made by mixing the packet with 200 grams of mayonnaise and 100 grams of unwhipped Telma Whip. The packets are marked "Kasher for milk dishes only" because of the instructions to blend with cheese, but the contents of the packets themselves — even the Roquefort and Liptauer flavours — are made with purely parve (vegetarian) ingredients.

Chancellor Brandt's visit

CHANCELLOR Willy Brandt's visit to Israel, which begins today, is a milestone in the relations between Israel and Germany.

It comes at a time when Germany's prominent role in European and world affairs has gained wide recognition, and at a time when Israel, which has traditionally looked to Europe for friendship and trade, is intent on opening a new relationship with the Common Market.

The visit of any leading German is bound to evoke in Israel memories of the past which continue to haunt us as a nation and as individuals. That past cannot be erased nor forgotten, but it also cannot be permitted to disrupt the delicate and important relationships that have evolved between Israel and Germany over the years.

Mr. Brandt's predecessors in office did their share in bridging what at one time seemed to be an impassable abyss. And he has continued to nourish and promote these ties. He has understood the unique nature of the relations between Germans and Jews. He has declined to join those in Germany who call for "normalization" of relations which are by their very nature unique. He has also understood, in a way that some quarters in Germany have not, that improved relations between Germany and the Arab states should not and cannot be achieved at Israel's expense.

The conversations that will be held between Mr. Brandt and Premier Golda Meir are not expected to lead to any dramatic results. But they will surely help clarify Israel's future ties with Germany and with Europe as a whole.

Given the changes that are now taking place as a result of the fast growing relations between Western Europe and the Communist states — changes initiated in large part by Mr. Brandt — such an opportunity for high level talks on the future of Israel's links with Germany and Europe is especially timely and useful.

Mr. Brandt comes as the first German head of Government to visit Israel while in office. This fact in itself gives his visit prime significance and should set a course for the future development of relations between Bonn and Jerusalem.

A REALISTIC APPROACH

(By arrangement with "Ma'ariv")

When leaders lived as they pleased

LONDON (AP). — Ever since the Duke of Wellington, victor at Waterloo and later prime minister, told the top call girl of his day to "publish and be damned," the British cabinet has provided an avid public with some of its spiciest sex scandals.

Those who profess to be shocked by the goings on involving Lord Lambton and Jellicoe, two Cabinet members who resigned after being linked to call girls, should have lived in the good old days when politicians really considered their private lives private and the public loved them for it.

Harriette Wilson, the leading demi-monde (19th century word for call girl) told in her headline-making story of the "Iron Duke's" return from a victorious campaign in Spain. According to Harriette, Wellington, fresh from battle, pounded on her door after midnight while she was upstairs with the Duke of Argyll.

Argyll, she said, put on one of her dressing gowns and night caps, went to the window and began a slanging match with Wellington. From Harriette's point of view, it all ended happily as Argyll, "swore that this night at least, he would be a match for the mighty Wellington."

Another lover was Lord Byron, the poet, whose best known affair was with Lady Caroline Lamb, wife of the man who became Lord Melbourne, Prime Minister of England and beloved mentor of the young Queen Victoria.

Melbourne also made sex headlines. His trouble began with what, from all evidence, was a completely platonic relationship with Caroline Norton. Her jealous, politically frustrated husband, George, did not take this attitude and, in April 1836, charged the prime minister with "criminal connection" with his wife.

While printing every gamey rumour they could find, the newspapers accompanied these reports with what Lord David Cecil has called "pious reflections on the deplorable prevalence of vice in high places."

King William IV said "No" when asked if Melbourne should resign. Wellington said he would refuse to serve in any cabinet formed as the result of such a resignation. Amidst intense public agitation, came the day of the trial. Couriers, booted and spurred, waited to rush the verdict to every important capital in Europe, thousands of curious milled about outside.

The proceedings lasted 13 hours and the case ended at midnight with the jury returning a verdict of innocent without leaving the box. There was thunderous applause in the court and cheers in the House of Commons.

Wellington, the Iron Duke, a cabinet member who didn't resign.

The next criminal connection involved Melbourne's brother-in-law, another prime minister, Lord Palmerston. Palmerston was referred to as "Lord Cupid" by the "Times" and there were frequent references to his affairs with the Countess of Jersey and Princess Lieven, wife of the Russian ambassador.

When Palmerston was 70 and Britain's most popular politician, an Irish journalist named O'Kane brought suit charging the lord had committed adultery with his wife, Palmerston's rival, Benjamin Disraeli commented: "It will make Palmerston more popular than ever." Disraeli was right.

Mrs. O'Kane claimed she had never been legally married to the man who brought the divorce action and Lord Palmerston submitted an affidavit saying the suit had been filed for "motives of extortion" and it was dismissed. There were cheers in every gin palace in London.

Willy Brandt's fight against Hitler

Chancellor Brandt

Eric Gottgetren writes of Willy Brandt's struggle — as a journalist in exile — to gain support for the forces against Hitler. The writer worked with Brandt on a German paper in the late '20s.

WILLY Brandt was among the first, if not in fact the very first journalist to reveal to the world the existence of Hitler's death camps in Poland, even before the crematoria in Auschwitz were completed. It took some time before his report was believed.

The story of when and how Willy Brandt conveyed the evil news was disclosed last August in "The New York Times" by H.R. Wisnegrad, an American Jewish journalist in Washington. Wisnegrad recalled that in mid-1942 the Overseas News Agency for which he was then working received from Brandt, its Stockholm correspondent, several news items on the death camps prepared for the Jews by Hitler's henchmen. Many of ONA's subscribers did not at first believe the news and refrained from publishing it. They only changed their minds when corroborative evidence came in from other sources in Geneva and Lisbon.

It will be recalled that it was on December 8, 1942, that Rabbi Stephen Wise led a delegation to the White House and handed President Roosevelt a 20-page document entitled "Blueprint for Extermination." The delegation told the President that two million Jews had already been killed in Hitler Europe and that, according to information received from an anti-Nazi German industrialist by the Jewish World Congress representative in Geneva, mass murder by asphyxiation was being prepared.

Brandt's career as a newspaperman began while he was still a pupil at the Johanneum Secondary School in Luebeck and a leader of the "Rote Falken," a Socialist youth organization devoted mainly to hikes, sports and cultural activities. He wrote frequently for the local Social Democrat daily, the "Luebecker Volksbote," edited by Dr. Jules Leber, an Alsatian Socialist Reichstag Deputy. In 1929, I was one of the Volksbote's three sub-editors, and I can still remember the then 16-year-old blond Herbert Frahm (he adopted Willy Brandt as a pen-name when he left Germany) storming into the office from time to time with a manuscript — usually on Socialist youth activities.

Officers' plot

Dr. Leber, the editor-in-chief, was in those years Herbert's mentor and fatherly friend. Not only did the younger almost religiously study Leber's excellent editorials and attend each party meeting he addressed, but he also discussed with Leber all the issues of German policy and particularly the vital problem of how to stem the Nazi flood.

Leber did not live to see his pupil's triumph. He was arrested by the Nazis early in 1933, held for four years in prisons and concentration camps, later released but rearrested in 1944 because of his involvement in the officers' anti-Nazi plot and executed on January 5, 1945, in Berlin. For Willy Brandt and all who knew him, Leber remained the prototype of the genuine German humanist and fighter for freedom.

The second-in-command at the "Volksbote" was Dr. Fritz Solmitz, who also had a considerable influence on young Herbert Frahm through his articles and his deep interest in the Socialist youth movement. Solmitz was an intellectual of Jewish origin who had joined the Socialist movement in the hope that it would combine modern thought with the best of Jewish and Christian ethics. He accordingly gave his moral and practical support to the group of "Religious Socialists" within the German Social Democratic Party in the hope of modifying its sometimes somewhat abstract and dogmatic Marxist approach.

Solmitz was murdered by his Nazi gaolers in September 1933.

INVASION OF SECRECY

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, — The Better Business Bureau's reply to M. Livni's complaint (both published in your issue of May 17) is astounding. A seller is perfectly within his rights if he refuses payment by cheque and demands cash. But to call the bank by phone in order to find out the position of the client's account and to go "pretending" to speak from another bank so as to obtain the information is a shameful invasion of a professional secret which belongs exclusively to the client and may not be disclosed without his consent. To justify this indecent practice the Bureau alleges that it is "difficult and costly to prosecute" the drawer of a cheque. This is a flimsy pretext, since there is no need to prosecute at all, a cheque being, like a court judgment, capable of direct execution. The Better Business Bureau has missed an opportunity of living up to its name.

MUSIC REVIEWS CRITICIZED

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, — The manner in which Mr. Boehm reviews two events of Israel's music life (May 22) must evoke nothing but the most intense opposition of every decent music expert who was present. The decision in the competition for brass quintets organized by the League of Israeli Composers was in favour of the work of Moshe Gassner. The composition, "Amnon and Tamar," commended by Mr. Boehm as "well conceived and attractive," does not justify this praise in my opinion and in that of the majority of more than 20 judges. It is absolutely legitimate for Mr. Boehm to express his own opinion, but only as his personal opinion. He is going too far when he abuses the opportunity to reject the prize work in such an ill-intentioned manner.

In his second review of May 22 (of a concert by the Israel Chamber Ensemble), Mr. Boehm disapproves of a symphony by Franz Schubert. Among experts, he is considered a more or less gifted composer. Whoever listened to the concert felt the noble and exquisitely delicate texture of this work in a rendition by Uri Segal which was of high standard. All the more so as it was performed after a composition, and vulgar sentimentality of which has no place in a serious concert.

Anyway, I consider it a great honour to belong, with Franz Schubert, in the same class of illustrious composers who are the object of Mr. Boehm's abuse.

HOW TO PREVENT ROAD SLAUGHTER

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, — In your issue of May 17 you report "five killed on a road" and you print a reader's letter regarding "slaughter on the road." It is high time to stop wallowing in blood and to introduce some really measures to prevent this. However, attempts to educate the public through the press, films, etc. will have as little effect as the campaigns against littering, drug-taking and squandering time and money. The only way to reduce the number of traffic accidents is to reduce new and severe laws. The present ones are too lax, are, in many cases, "a law that is not only driving license, also vehicle licenses will be drawn after a serious accident the final verdict is handed and that, under no circumstances will they be returned early if livelihoods are thus threatened." The only way to reduce the number of traffic accidents is to reduce new and severe laws.

ANTI-SEMITISM AMONG CHRISTIANS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, — Rabbi Dr. H.E. Thal's letter (May 6) quoting a book which is described as "overwhelming evidence of Christianity's persecution of Jews" is the saddest and chapter in the history of humanity to man.

I am a member of the Orthodox Church. Mine is able old church. Ancient A. I conceded to have been the tion in the world to have Christianity as a state religion. A.D. Historically, nei church or nation has persecuted against Jews. With minor exceptions, all other churches of Eastern origin.

Historically, anti-Semitism has been the disease mainly of oriented institutions. They have not discriminated against Jews. Rabbi Blumenfeld should specify. His letter and sources show the fallacy of sweeping generalizations. There are always exceptions. Letter does not add to the strength of the ecumenic of the Holy City.
